THE
Northern Genealogist.

VOL. IV.

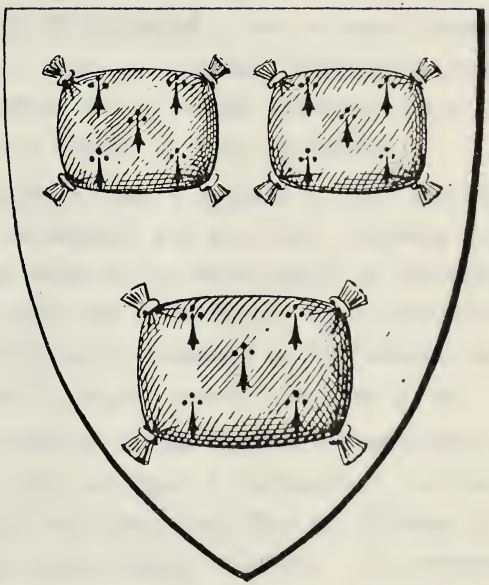
EDITED BY

A. GIBBONS, F.S.A.

BIRMINGHAM:

C. Cooper & Co., Ltd., Law Courts Press, 194, Corporation St.

Y 709.16.1



The Arms of Redman or Redmayne of Levens.
Harewood, and Thornton-in-Lonsdale
Gules, three cushions ermine.

PREFACE.

In issuing to Subscribers the Fourth Volume of The Northern Genealogist, I have to thank them for enabling me to print a mass of original information relating to the Northern Counties which would otherwise have remained in obscurity, and in danger of utter destruction.

Of especial value I venture to think are the Heriots of the Manor of Wakefield, and the York Marriage Licences. To decipher these would be for most people an extremely laborious and fatiguing task, and it is matter for congratulation that the considerable instalments contained in this Volume make so large a part of these important records accessible to all.

With regard to the number of subscribers, I am glad to say that there has been a fair increase, and the Publishers inform me that they quite hope that the Volume for 1902 may consist of four parts instead of three. As, however, they are not yet "out of the wood," I cannot definitely promise this; but I think Subscribers will accept my assurance that it will be done if possible—that is, if it does not involve too great a loss.

A. GIBBONS.

December, 1901.

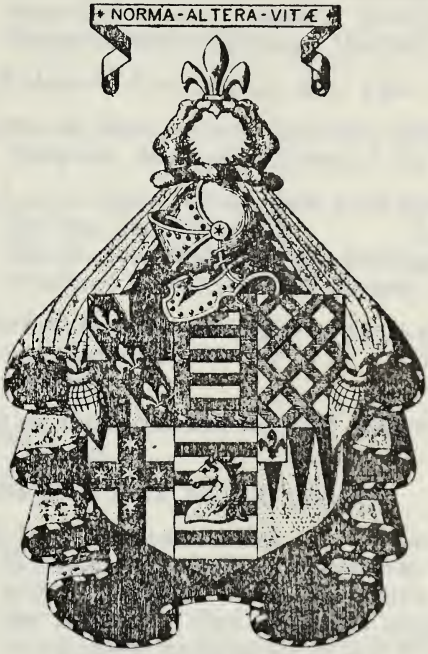
EURE ARMS.

THE shield of arms here reproduced is from an ancient roll which was given to the late Richard Almack, Esq., F.S.A., by Sir Hyde Parker.



EURE OF BELTON & Co LINCOLN

The quarterings are as follows:—

1. Quarterly or and gules, on a bend sable three fleurs de lis argent—EURE of Belton.
2. Barry of eight argent and gules, on a bordure azure as many martlets or—MERLEY.
3. Argent, fretty azure—LOUND.
4. Argent, on a cross azure five estoiles or—LINCOLN.
5. Barry of eight, argent and gules, a horse's head erased or—GARDENER.
6. Or, three piles sable, on a canton argent a fleur de lis of the second—CUDWORTH.

Crest. Two lions' paws or, supporting a fleur de lis argent.

Motto. Norma altera vitæ.

The quarterings came into the family as follows:—

Sir Robert de Eure of Belton in the Isle of Axholme (son of John FitzRobert, Lord of Warkworth, Clavering, and Eure, who died in 1240) married Isabella, dau. and coheiress of Roger de Merley, Baron of Morpeth.

Sir Robert de Eure, his son, died 1366. (Inq. post mortem.)

Stephen de Eure, his son, died 1367 (Inq. p. m.), having married Margaret, dau. and coheiress of Sir Peter Lound, knight.

Sir John de Eure, his son, died 1388 (Inq. p. m.), having married the dau. and heiress of . . . Lincoln. It was probably this Sir John who erected a parting-cross at the place where Mowbray parted from his duchess.

Robert de Eure, his son, aged 41 years at his father's death, married Catherine, dau. of . . . Chauncye, Baron of Skirpenbec.

John de Eure, his son, married Margaret, dau. of Sir Richard Tempest.

Sir Hugh de Eure, his son, married . . . Gascoigne.

John Eure, his son, married . . . dau. and heiress of . . . Gardener. He built a large hall at Westgate, between Sandtoft and Belton, which afterwards became the property of the Rythers. Part of it was standing in 1830, and on a string course could be traced J. EWRE, A.D. 1519. E.I.P.O.

John Eure, his son, died vita patris 26 Oct. 1512, having married Eleanor, dau. and heiress of . . . Cudworth.

Elwick. By Inquisition taken before the Lord Mayor of York in 1638 it appeared that George Elwick died 10 Feb. 40 Eliz. seised of lands within the Manor of Bishopthorpe, and that William Elwick his eldest son and heir was living "in Hambrough or some other place beyond seas," in or about 1621, but is now dead. Richard Elwick was his brother and heir, but is now dead. Walter Elwick was his son and heir, but died about 5 years since, before the death of the said Richard his father. Edward Elwick, the only surviving son of the said Richard, is now living and present in Court. In 1620 Richard Elwick is entered as of Seaton Ross.—[Court Book of the Manor of Bishopthorpe.]

HERIOTS, &c., IN THE WAKEFIELD MANOR ROLLS.

The present Calendar is ready for printing as far back as the 14th century, but the period of 1500—1560 is chosen to begin with, as being of more general interest to modern genealogists, who will thus be saved from going through the Rolls membrane by membrane, as there are no Docket Books or Indexes for this period. Practically all the entries of Heriots are here given, the few omitted being largely or entirely undecipherable.

KNIGHTS OF THE BISHOPRIC OF DURHAM PRESENT AT THE BATTLE OF LEWES, 1264.

The following list is printed from an early 17th Century MS. in the possession of Mr. Reginald Peacock. A list of these knights was printed in the Wearmouth Magazine in 1882, from a copy, circa 1700, "found in the Lord Conyers' study," but as it differs in many particulars from Mr. Peacock's MS., the two lists are here printed side by side.

Mr. Peacock's MS. contains also an Armorial of the gentry of Yorkshire and Durham:—

HERIOTS, &c., IN THE WAKEFIELD MANOR ROLLS.

The present Calendar is ready for printing as far back as the 14th century, but the period of 1500—1563 is chosen to begin with, as being of more general interest to modern genealogists, who will thus be saved from going through the Rolls membrane by membrane, as there are no Docket Books or Indexes for this period. NOTES AND QUERIES.

Manor of Toley Fee. I shall be very grateful for any clue which would enable me to locate "the Manor of Tuley Fee" or "Toley-Fee," which is mentioned in two of the feet of fines temp. Hen. 8 and Eliz. (see Yorks. Arch. Assoc. Record Series Vol. II. p. 73, id. Vol VII. p. 145). It would appear to have been somewhere in the neighbourhood of Driffield.—BERNARD P. SCATTERGOOD, Moorside, Far Headingley, Leeds.

Mercer. In reply to a query in the "Northern Genealogist," Vol. IV., part 1, page 18, the arms of Mercer are, or were: "Or, on a fess between 3 cross patées gules as many bezants." Taken from Pont's M.SS.

In return for this information, will your querist kindly let me know the Mercer pedigree from 1450 to 1600, if he knows it? My reason for asking is that one Joan Mercer was wife of John de Layland in 1508, and she had property at West Derby, near Liverpool. She was living a widow in 1530.—F. LAYLAND BARRATT, 68, Cadogan Square, London, S.W.

Stonehouse. A Cleveland Catholic family. In a short paper contributed to Vol. III. p. 50 of the "Northern Genealogist," I omitted to state that the sturdy recusant was arrested in December, 1591, and so was in prison 20 months at one stretch for refusing to go to the Protestant Church. It had not occurred to me to search the index for "Stayanus." He seems to have died earlier than assumed, and is probably the Christopher Stonehus buried at Whitby, Feb. 17, 1616-7, and the "Christofer Stonas, Whitbye, burgisse," whose will was made Feb. 12, and proved March 20, 1616-7, and so not the Christopher Stonas, yeoman, on the jury, who was buried Jany. 6, 1620-1. But there is another Christofer Stanous of Lyth, yeoman, whose will was made March, 1616, and proved Sept. 8, 1617 (Yorksh. Archl. Society Record series Vol. XXVIII.). The Christopher Stonehouse who was buried in St. Dionis Backchurch (Harleian Soc.) in 1625 is still another. "Humanum est errare."

Looking over the Middlesex Record Society's publications, I think we may identify his two sons Thomas and Cuthbert as recusants in London, with their two wives, under the names of Stonehouse, Stonehurst and Stonust, yeomen, although we need not be surprised that Cuthbert is also called a "jeweller," for we know his father was a "jeater," and worked in jet and amber.

I give the list of all those associated with them by residence, as Foster (? Forster) and some others have a northern sound, and Thomas Foster may be the loyalist.

The Harleian Society promise to the subscribers of their Parish Register Series the registers of St. Sepulchre shortly. They may throw further light on the matter.—JOSEPH S. HANSOM, 27, Alfred Place West, South Kensington, London, S.W.

MARRIAGE BONDS OF THE DEAN AND CHAPTER OF YORK.

By T. B. Whytehead, Esq., Chapter Clerk, and Captain Sandwith, 8th Hussars

The previous Series of Dean and Chapter's Marriage Bonds (completed in Vol. IV., page 33), comprises all that exist in York Minster for the several Vacancies of the See, that is to say, for the whole Diocese, in 1664, 1683-88, 1757, 1761, and 1776-7.

There are also bonds for two later vacancies, 1807-8 and 1847, which may be printed later.

The present Series comprises the Dean and Chapter's Bonds for their own peculiar jurisdiction, and that of most of their prebends, extending over some 70 or 80 parishes in the City of York, and the Counties of York, Nottingham, and Lancaster. Some of the Prebendaries issued their own Marriage Licences, which may be printed later.

These Dean and Chapter Bonds are put up in bundles of various periods, the dates often over-lapping each other, and the early ones have been calendared as they came to hand, a fact which will account for their appearing, now and then, out of their due order of date.

REVIEWS.

"THE GENEALOGIST" (N.S.) Vol. xvii. Edited by H. W. Forsyth Harwood.

The seventeenth volume of this standard periodical more than maintains the level of its predecessors. In asserting this we speak advisedly, and as having close acquaintance with the whole series. General Wrottesley's "Pedigrees from the Plea Rolls," Mr. Clay's "Visitation of Yorkshire, with Additions," and Mr. Watson's stupendous "4,096 Quartiers of King Edward VII.," are all of first-class importance. In addition to this we have a most entertaining account of the Rodney Family, a collection of charters relating to Sempringham Abbey, and a series of Grants and Certificates of Arms, and each of these three occupies many pages.

The foregoing form the staple of the volume's contents, but there are also contributions by Mr. J. H. Round, Mr. Joseph Bain, and other well-known authorities, elaborate pedigrees of the Castillion and Walsh families, by Mr. G. E. Cokayne and Mr. Hussey Walsh respectively; and two valuable supplements, of which we must mention General Wrottesley's unique history of the Wrottesley family.

North Country readers will find much to interest them in Major Poynton's Sempringham Charters, but Mr. Clay's instalments of the 1665 Visitation of Yorkshire will perhaps arouse more of their attention, the pedigrees dealt with being those of Norton of St. Nicholas juxta Richmond, Jessop, Hanson of Woodhouse, Holdsworth, Beckwith, Spencer of Attercliffe, Holme of Paul Holme, Metcalfe of Nappa, Buck, Wentworth, Lyster of Thorneton, Lyster of Midhope, Monckton and Boynton. Several of the "Pedigrees from the Plea Rolls" relate to the North Country, as, for example, those of de la Val, Coygners, Longvillers and Neville, Dacre, Clyf, Harington, Fairfax, Roos, Tatehale and Cromwell, and Asfordby.

"STORY OF THE SURNAME OF BEATSON." Compiled by Surgeon-General W. B. Beatson. London: Elliot. Stock, 1900.

This is an interesting, well-printed, and tastefully illustrated account of the military family of Beatson, a younger branch of the Beatsons, lairds of Kilvie, in the county of Fife. It is preceded by a brief history of the Baties of Eskdale, one of the lesser border clans, from whom the author considers that some at any rate of the Beatsons are descended. Pages 10 and 11 certainly make it seem likely that Batie and Batieson were interchangeable, but there may have been some confusion in the minds of the officials who wrote now of John Batiesoun of the Scoir and Archibald Baittieson his brother, and then of John Batie of the Scoir and Archibald Batie his brother. Such a confusion would be likely if families of the two names inhabited a district.

We doubt whether the author is correct in deriving all such names as Beattie, Battie, Batson, etc., from the Christian name Bartholomew. We believe there was a Teutonic name Batta, quite as likely to have been the source of such surnames; in addition to which there is the name Beatrix, and even the humble Bet.

The author thinks it likely that the Yorkshire Battes and Battys came from the Eskdale Baties, but this requires confirmation, and does not seem very probable. We believe that these names were prevalent in Yorkshire long before the Union between Scotland and England, or the dispersal of the Eskdale Baties.

With regard to the Armorial Bearings of the Beatsons, we fear that nothing can be inferred from the spear heads, while the "bee" crest is a palpable pun.

The Scottish heralds appear to have granted to James Betson of Contle the ancient arms of the English Willingtons; but it is curious that the author does not seem to have noticed that the three eagles of this James' crest were probably granted in connection with the building or restoration of Clochrite Bridge, on which his arms were carved. Finally, we should have welcomed further genealogical particulars than are here given; but we gather that there is another and larger work, containing genealogies of the Beatsons, and that from this has been culled some of the information contained in Surgeon-General Beatson's interesting book.

"Transactions of the Midland Record Society." Vol. iv. Edited by Wright Wilson, F.R.C.S., Edin., Hon. Secretary.

We have been favoured with a copy of the above, which was issued to subscribers for the year 1900. The volume is not very thick, consisting, indeed, of only forty closely printed quarto pages, but the matter appears to us very good indeed, and entirely free from padding. Nine pages are devoted to full abstracts of early Warwickshire Wills, and another nine to abstracts of all the Gibbons, etc., Wills at Lichfield down to 1627. There are good indexes (for vol. iii.) of names and places, the latter containing, we observe, a reference to Constable-Burton in Yorkshire. The last twelve pages contain an instalment of a separately-paged transcript of the 1327 Subsidy Roll of Warwickshire, a work which should be of the greatest value for the purposes of local history.

We do not suppose that there will be more than a scanty reference here and there of interest to North Country readers, but it is interesting for one district to know of good antiquarian work done in another and we may congratulate the thirty or forty faithful subscribers upon possessing a series of volumes whose value is sure to increase, seeing that only fifty copies are printed each year.

A SKETCH OF THE HISTORY OF THE REDMAYNES OF LEVENS, HAREWOOD, AND THORNTON-IN-LONSDALE.

[By W. Greenwood, Esqr., Barrister-at-Law.]

I.—THE REDMAYNES OF LEVENS AND HAREWOOD.

Of the family of Redman or Redmayne, described by Curwen in "Levens Hall" as "of immense wealth and importance," the first known member appears to have been Norman de Redman, who was one of the earliest of English Crusaders, and was attached to the suite of an official of the Holy Hospital at Jerusalem.

Little is known of Norman beyond the fact that he held lands in the neighbourhood of Redman, in Cumberland, now called Redmain, forming a joint township with Isell; that he must have been living in the days of the Conqueror, and that he died in 1150.

In the time of Norman's son, Henry de Redman, the family came into greater prominence, and took rank among the most important families in the North of England. It was through Henry that the Redmans obtained possession of the Manor of Levens, in Westmoreland, by grant partly from Ketel, son of Uchtred, and partly from Gilbert Fitz Reinfrid, a man of immense possessions and influence, and a favourite of King John. At Levens, thus acquired by Henry de Redman, the family lived for three centuries—from 1187 until, in 1487, the Hall and Manor were sold by one of the Thornton Redmans to Alan Bellingham, in whose family it remained for two centuries more. In the days of the Redman occupation of Levens Hall it was a strongly fortified building, with battlements and moat, and an extensive deer-park, enclosed by Sir Matthew de Redman, by Royal licence, in 1360.

Burn states that Levens was purchased by one of the Bellinghams of —— Redman of Thornton (circ. 1489), and this appears to be the commonly accepted view, which is adopted by Curwen ("Levens Hall") and others. According to Dodsworth's M.S., 159 fo. 196, Levens and Selside were sold by Matthew Redman in 4 Elizabeth to —— Bellingham (A.D. 1561); and the inq. p. m. on Richard Redman, of Harewood Castle (36 Henry VIII.), gives the "Manor of Lewyns" among his possessions. From these facts it would appear that Levens was Redmayne property much later than is commonly asserted.

Of the original building parts remain in the Levens Hall of to-day; among other Redman features retained being the square tower and the old hall. In the north drawing-room may be seen an ancient charter bearing the date 1190, with the seal of Richard I. attached, exempting Henry de Redman from the payment of a tax called "Nutgeld"; and in some of the rooms is still preserved tapestry wrought by the hands of Redman chatelaines six centuries or more ago.

The deer-park of Levens remains to-day almost exactly as in the days of Sir Matthew de Redman, in the fourteenth century, with the exception that its area is now smaller. For a full description of the wonders of Levens Hall, and its history for more than seven centuries, reference should be made to Curwen's "Levens Hall," Captain Bagot's "Colonel Grahme," and Mrs. Bagot's article in the Pall Mall Magazine of April, 1897.

Henry de Redman, the original Redman lord of the manor of Levens, was for four years Sheriff of Yorkshire, with Gilbert FitzReinfrid, Seneschal of Kendal in 1212, and a benefactor of Furness Abbey.

Henry de Redman appears to have had a son and heir, Benedict (who did not, however, succeed him), who gave his name to the township of Yealand Redmayne in Lancashire, which bears the name to-day.

In the year 1200, Henry de Redman bore the following arms: Gules, 3 cushions ermine, tasselled or. Crest, a horse's head, gules, couped and maned or; and these arms appear in the first roll of arms ever prepared in England, in the reign of Henry III. (1243-46), under the name of Sir Matthew Redman, son of Henry. These arms probably indicate some connection with the baronial family of Greystock, in Cumberland, to whom Gules, three cushions argent, is assigned in Papworth's "Armorial."* The family of Hutton, and perhaps other north-country families, also bore cushions in their shields, probably for the same reason. The bearings no doubt originated from some feudal service connected with the bearing of a cushion, but Guillim tells the legend of the origin of the cushions (or pillows) in the Redman coat-of-arms, which may be repeated here as an example of the bad old custom of inventing history for the purpose of explaining the unknown. An early member of the family, "being challenged to combat by a stranger, and time and place appointed as usual, this man was so intent on the performance that, coming very early to the place, and his adversary not arrived, he fell asleep in his tent; at last, the hour being come, the noise of the trumpets sounded to the battle, whereupon waking suddenly he ran furiously upon his antagonist and slew him."

After Sir Matthew de Redman, whose name appears on the first Roll of Arms in 1243, and who was Seneschal of Kendal, the next notable member of the family was his grandson, also called Sir Matthew, who seems to have been a doughty man of arms, chiefly engaged in fighting the Scots and defending the marches against their inroads. In 1308 he commanded the forces of the County of Lancaster to resist an incursion of Robert Bruce; and was generally employed in raising and leading levies of armed men for defence or for the invasion of Scotland against Wallace and Bruce.

* Though the Lords Dacre, representing one co-heiress of Greystock, appear to have quartered Barry, three chaplets, for Greystock. It may also be mentioned that the arms of "Mahteu de Redeman" appear under Northumberland and Cumberland on the "Parliamentary Roll" as "de Goulys a iij horiler de ermine." The date of this Roll is Edward I. or Edward II., but the arms of Sir "Mahteu" seem to be an interpolation of the fifteenth century. (GENEALOGIST N.S. XII. 278 and 282.) It must also be added that the Roll of 1243-6, mentioned above, was (to say the least) edited, and probably to a considerable extent compiled, by Glover, the Elizabethan herald.

He was twice (in 1295 and 1307) returned as Knight of the Shire for Lancashire; and, in 1313, as Knight of the Shire for Westmoreland, the county which Sir Simon Redman also represented in the Parliaments of 1312 and 1324.

The next Sir Matthew, who died in 1360, and who was son of the last named, was Knight of the Shire for Westmoreland in 1357, a leader of armies against the Scots, and lord, among other manors, of the manors of Levens, Lupton, and Selside.

He was succeeded by his son, Sir Matthew, whose deeds of valour and discretion are told in such contemporary records as Froissart's and Grafton's Chronicles, etc. Froissart, in his story of the battle of Otterbourne, gives an amusing account of Sir Matthew's share in this battle; how when the tide of fortune turned against the English he discreetly took to his horse's heels and was hotly pursued by Sir James Lindsay, a Scottish knight of noted valour; how Sir Matthew was overtaken and forced to defend himself in a duel which ended in his discomfiture, and how, after being taken prisoner, he arranged with Sir James Lindsay to deliver himself up, at the end of three weeks, at Carlisle.

When Sir Matthew presented himself at Carlisle at the stipulated time, he found that his captor was a prisoner in our hands, and the matter was ultimately arranged by the two prisoners having a good dinner together, and agreeing that bygones should be bygones.

Grafton also tells an amusing story of Sir Matthew, when he was Governor of Berwick, and gives the dialogue between him and the Duke of Lancaster, to whom, in the King's name, he refused admittance to the stronghold.

Sir Matthew fought more or less bravely under John of Gaunt, in France and Spain, 1373-1383; and in the latter year was made Governor of Roxburgh in succession to the earl of Northumberland. A few years later he was appointed a Commissioner to treat with the Scottish envoys. He was ordered by the King to proclaim the truce concluded with France, was commissioned to treat with the Scots with Lord Nevill of Raby, and generally was entrusted with offices of the highest dignity and national importance.

He married Joan, daughter of Henry Lord Fitz Hugh, the widow of Baron Greystock, through whom the Redmans claim descent from the Lords Scrope of Masham, the Bulmers, etc., and a common descent with Queen Catherine Parr, the Dukes of Norfolk, Devonshire, Westminster, and Sunderland, the Marquis of Bute, and many other noblemen of to-day.

Sir Matthew's daughter, Felicia, married Sir John de Lumley, son of Ralph, Lord Lumley; and from her are lineally descended the Earls of Scarborough, the Duke of Westminster, and other noblemen of our own times. Her great-grandson, Thomas Lumley, married Elizabeth Plantagenet, daughter of King Edward IV.

With Sir Richard Redmayne, son of Sir Matthew and brother of Felicia, commenced an epoch of greater prosperity for the family of Redmayne. About 1392 Sir Richard married Elizabeth, daughter and co-heiress of the first Lord Aldeburgh, and by this alliance became owner of a moiety of the manor and castle of Harewood, near Leeds, the other half going to her sister Sibyl, who married Sir William Ryther, of Ryther Castle. Elizabeth Aldeburgh had previously married Sir Bryan Stapleton, of Carleton, and from this union the Lords Beaumont are lineally descended.

The manor and castle of Harewood, which thus came into the possession of the families of Ryther and Redmayne, descended to the daughters of Lord Aldeburgh from their mother Elizabeth, who was sister (and apparently heiress) of Robert, Lord Lisle de Rougemont, whose grandfather, Robert de Lisle, inherited Harewood, as heir of Isabel, Countess of Albemarle. This Isabel was daughter, and eventually heiress, of Baldwin de Redvers, seventh Earl of Devon, which Baldwin apparently inherited Harewood from his mother, Margaret, daughter and heir of Warine Fitzgerald of Harewood. It would, however, appear that the family of Countess Isabel's husband had a separate interest in Harewood, for his great-grandfather, William de Blois, Earl of Albemarle, is said to have married Cecily, "Lady of Harewood," daughter of William fitz Duncan (nephew of Malcolm, King of Scotland), by Alice, daughter of Robert de Romeley, Lord of Skipton, in Craven.

The Castle of Harewood, which thus came into the joint possession of the Redmaynes and Rythers, was built soon after the Conquest, and was more than three centuries old when Sir Richard Redmayne first became its tenant and part-owner. For nearly three centuries more it was occupied alternately by the Redmans and Rythers, when (circa 1566) it passed into the hands of the Gascoignes, with whom the Redmaynes frequently intermarried. In later years it became the possession successively of the Wentworths (Earls of Strafford), Sir John Cutler, Elizabeth, Countess of Radnor, and John Boulter, Esq., by whom it was sold to Henry Lascelles, Esq., father of the first Lord Harewood, circa 1721.

Of the castle, which was, in its prime, of great extent and one of the most important in England, nothing now remains but a portion of the ruined keep, a pathetic witness to its former strength and grandeur.

In the old hall of the castle were many coats-of-arms illustrating the Redmayne alliances with local families, such as the Gascoignes, Aldeburghs, Daincourts, etc. For some centuries the Redmaynes were buried in Redman's Chapel, in the adjacent Harewood Church; but of the tombs erected to their memory only two appear to have survived the hand of time. These are altar tombs, on each of which are recumbent figures of a knight and lady, to the memory of Sir Richard Redmayne and his wife Elizabeth, daughter of Lord Aldeburgh, and to the memory of Sir Richard and his wife Elizabeth, daughter of Sir William Gascoigne, the famous Chief Justice who is said to have sent the Prince of Wales, afterwards Henry V., to prison for contempt of court.

Sir Richard Redmayne, of Harewood, appears to have been a man skilled both in arms and diplomacy, for in 1399-1400 we find that leave was granted to him to hold a tournament at Carlisle, and a little later he had letters of protection for a diplomatic journey to Ireland in company with John de Cobham, third Lord Cobham. He was Sheriff of Yorkshire, and Knight of the Shire for that county; and in 1415 he was elected Speaker of the House of Commons. His arms may be seen to-day in the Speaker's House at Westminster, the crest, curiously enough, being the "bloody hand," the crest of the Redmaynes of Thornton-in-Lonsdale, thus clearly indicating the close connection between the two branches of the family.

Sir Richard survived his first wife for many years, and seems to have married for his second wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Sir William Gascoigne, Chief Justice of England. He died in 1426, leaving two sons, Matthew and Richard, and a daughter, Joan, who married Sir Thomas Wentworth, and became the ancestress of the Earls of Strafford (including the historic Earl who was executed on Tower Hill in 1641), and many other existing noble families. She appears to have been the first chatelaine of Wentworth Woodhouse, the present seat of her descendants, the Earls Fitzwilliam.

In a pedigree supplied to me by the College of Arms, Elizabeth Gascoigne is given as the wife of the second Sir Richard, grandson of the Speaker. This is obviously wrong. Sir Richard, who married Elizabeth Aldeburgh, refers to her in his will, of 3rd May, 1424, as "nuper uxor mea," thus clearly showing that at this date his first wife was dead. In 12 Henry VI. (1434) there was an inquisition on "Elizabeth, quæ fuit uxor Ricardi Redman Chivaler." That this was Elizabeth Gascoigne, Sir Richard's second wife, who survived her husband eight years, appears beyond dispute. The wife of Sir Richard's grandson, the second Sir Richard, of Harewood, was Margaret Middleton.

Sir Richard's eldest son and heir, Sir Matthew, died in his father's lifetime, having married Johanna, daughter of Sir Thomas Tunstall, of Thurland Castle, Lancashire, and leaving a son, Richard, a minor, who succeeded to his estates.

This second Sir Richard, who was Knight of the Shire for Westmoreland in 1442, married Margaret Middleton, through whom her descendants trace their lineage from the de Ferrers, Earls of Derby, the Lords Berkeley, and the Musgraves.

Sir Richard is said (by Sir George Duckett, who is descended from the Redmaynes of Harewood) to have had no less than thirteen children, of many of whom nothing appears to be known.

His eldest son, Sir William, who was M.P. for Westmoreland in 1477, died comparatively young (in 1483), and was succeeded by his brother, Sir Edward, who was only seventeen years old at the time of his brother's death. Sir Edward, who was High Sheriff of Cumberland (9 Henry VII.), married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir John Huddlestone, and died in 1510, leaving two sons, Henry and Richard.

The most historically interesting of the many brothers of Sir William and Sir Edward (sons of the second Sir Richard) was Dr. Richard Redmayne, who became, in succession, Bishop of St. Asaph, Exeter, and Ely. It was he who restored St. Asaph Cathedral when it was burnt by Owen Glendower, in 1492; he was one of the Commissioners appointed to treat for peace with the Scots, and in the following year he was sworn a member of the Privy Council. He died in 1505, and was buried in Ely Cathedral, where a magnificent altar-tomb perpetuates his memory.

Down to the time of Sir Edward, the Redmayne family had made their home partly at Levens Hall, in Westmoreland, and partly (alternately with the Rythers) at Harewood Castle. In Edward's time, however, the Manor and Hall of Levens are said to have passed into the hands of one of the Redmaynes of Thornton, by whom they were sold in 1487 (after almost exactly three centuries of occupation) to Alan Bellingham, the original seat of the family thus passing for ever out of Redmayne hands.

Richard Redman, son and heir of Sir Edward, had five sons and several daughters. Matthew, his eldest son and heir, was the last Redmayne who occupied the Castle of Harewood. He married a daughter of Sir William Gascoigne, into the possession of whose family, by some unexplained process, the manor and castle of Harewood passed. This Matthew gave to the King's escheator the following account of his estate in 1549: "Lands in Malnghall, Birthwaite and Kirkby in Kendal, Hind Castle, a moiety of Manor of Harewood and Castle there, and lands in Selside, Layton, Keswick, and Calton in Yorkshire."

Of Richard's other sons, Cuthbert appears to have settled in the neighbourhood of Whitby, and from his grandson, Giles, who migrated to Ireby (near Thornton-in-Lonsdale), the Redmaynes of Newcastle and Gateshead claim descent.

Anne Redmayne, sister of Cuthbert, married John Lambert, Esq., of Calton, from whose family the Earls of Cavan spring. Her daughter Avelyn married William Redmayne, of Thornton, and her grandson was General John Lambert, the famous Parliamentarian general of Cromwell's time.

II.—THE REDMAYNES OF THORNTON-IN-LONSDALE.

After Levens and Harewood, the most important settlement of the family was at Thornton-in-Lonsdale. The founder of this branch of the Redmaynes was James, possibly a younger son of the second Sir Richard of Harewood, who appears to have gone to Thornton, circa 1470. How lands at Thornton came into the possession of the family is a matter of uncertainty; but it seems more than probable that they originally formed the dower of Johanna, wife of Sir Matthew Redmayne and daughter of Sir Thomas Tunstall, who had large possessions in the district.

At Thornton Hall, described by Speight as "a substantial edifice with walls six feet thick," the Redmaynes lived for nearly two centuries, until, in the time of Major John Redmayne, who, according to the epitaph in Thornton Church, was—

> "Firm in his Faith, and valiant for his King, > Stout as an Ajax, just in everything."

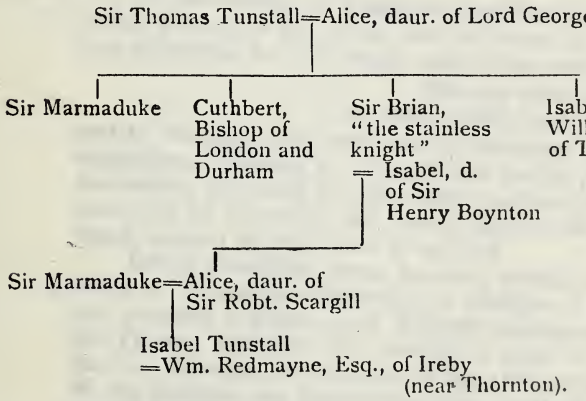
the Hall was destroyed by Cromwell.

James Redmayne had several sons, from the eldest of whom, John, the Redmaynes of Thornton descend. Edward, a younger son, became the founder of the Fulford branch of the family, and through his granddaughter, Isabel, who married Mr. William Robinson, Alderman of York, was the ancestor of the present Marquis of Ripon.

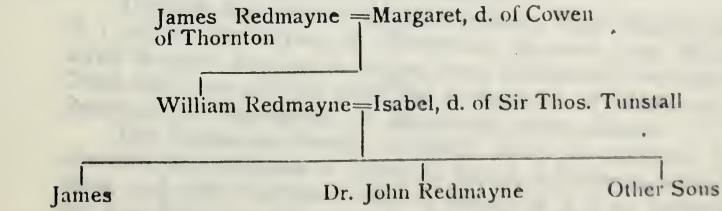
William Redmayne, another younger son of James, married Isabel, daughter of Sir Thomas Tunstall by Alice, daughter of Lord Nevill, and was grandfather of the William Redmayne who married Margaret Vavasour.

This was the second of five Redmayne alliances with the family of Tunstall, of Thurland Castle, through whom the Redmaynes claim descent from the Percies, Nevills, de Burghs, and many other ancient noble families; and also from Edward III., Henry III., Charlemagne, and the Dukes of Normandy. But perhaps the most interesting connection with this ancient family is through Sir Brian Tunstall, the "Stainless Knight" of Sir Walter Scott's "Flodden," whose grand-daughter, Isabell, married William Redmayne, of Ireby, and from whom many Redmaynes in the Thornton district are thus lineally descended. Sir Brian's sister, too, as before mentioned, married William, son of James Redmayne, the first Thornton settler, and this William was executor of Sir Brian's will after his death on Flodden Field.

The following pedigree will perhaps make these two Tunstall alliances clear:—



Dr. John Redmayne (1499-1551), the first Master of Trinity College, Cambridge, and one of the compilers of the Book of Common Prayer, was a member of the Thornton branch of the family, and probably a son of the William Redmayne who married Isabel, daughter of Sir Thomas Tunstall. Thus:—



Dr. John Redmayne, probably under the advice of his uncle, Cuthbert Tunstall, Bishop of Durham, studied at Oxford, Paris, and Cambridge (of which he was a Fellow, D.D., and Public Orator). He signed the decree declaring King Henry VIII.'s marriage to Anne of Cleves illegal, was a member of several important commissions, Archdeacon of Stafford and Prebendary of Westminster, and was buried in Westminster Abbey.

Richard Redmayne, of Thornton, married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Roger Cholmondeley, and sister of Sir Richard Cholmondeley, the famous "Black Knight of the North." Through her the Thornton Redmaynes claim descent from the Dukes of Normandy and Brittany.

Richard's brother, Francis, who married Margaret Hammerton, was for a time Lord of the Manor of Hellifield Peel, and his brother, Thomas, was Master of Jesus College, Cambridge.

William Redmayne, grandson of Richard and Elizabeth Cholmondeley, married Avelyn Lambert, granddaughter of Richard Redmayne, of Harewood, thus again uniting the branches of Harewood and Thornton, and continuing the Harewood descent in a second line to her descendants. Her son, Sir John Redmayne, who was Governor of Pontefract, and Ambassador to France, married "the Lady Sarah," who died in 1677, and whose tomb is still preserved, with a memorial of her son, Major John Redmayne, at Thornton.

In the church of Thornton may also be seen brass memorials to Ralph Redmayne (d. 1703), who left some of his silver to be converted into altar-plate for the church, and whose epitaph mentions—

". . . His last generosity
To altar, school, and poverty," and to Margaret, his wife, who is described as "a woman of generous disposition, courteous to all and kind to the poore." With Major John Redmayne, who died in 1680, and in whose lifetime Thornton Hall was destroyed by Cromwell, the palmy days of the Thornton branch of the family appear to have come to an end.

Before dismissing them, however, special mention should perhaps be made of Marmaduke Redmayne, a member of this branch of the family, and probably a grandson of William Redmayne and Isabel, daughter of Sir Thomas Tunstall, who received a grant of 8,000 acres of forfeited lands in Munster, at the close of the 16th century, in company with Sir Walter Raleigh and Spenser, the poet; and of Margaret Vavasour (mentioned before), who married Marmaduke's cousin, William (also grandson of the above-named William), through whom her offspring claim descent from the Nevills, Percies, FitzHughs, etc., and through Henry Percy, third Earl of Northumberland, from Edward III. and the Earl of Flanders, brother in law of William I.

Towards the close of the 16th century, Giles Redmayne, a grandson of Cuthbert Redmayne, of Harewood, migrated from Whitby to Ireby, which is about three miles distant from Thornton-in-Lonsdale. From this Giles, and through him, from the Redmaynes of Harewood, Levens and Redman, the Redmaynes of Newcastle claim descent.

The Redmayne family, although small in numbers, is now widely scattered, and members of it may be found in Durham, Kent, Buckinghamshire, and other counties; while a branch of it is in Ireland. All bear the arms borne by their ancestor, Henry de Redman, seven centuries ago, with such differences as are necessary to distinguish one branch from another.

HERIOTS, &c., ON THE WAKEFIELD MANOR ROLLS.

The present Calendar is ready for printing as far back as the 14th century, but the period of 1500—1563 is chosen to begin with, as being of more general interest to modern genealogists, who will thus be saved from going through the Rolls membrane by membrane, as there are no Docket Books or Indexes for this period. Practically all the entries of Heriots are here given, the few omitted being largely or entirely undecipherable.

GARFORD, OF STEETON HALL, YORKSHIRE, AND GARFORD, OF CORBY, LINCOLNSHIRE.

ARTHUR GARFORTH, AFTERWARDS CALLED GARFORD.

The above was the third son of William Garforth, of Steeton Hall, Yorks,* and was born in 1596. In 1628 he married Letitia, daughter of Robert Cashell, of Glatton, Hunts, Esqr. At the Record Office is a Bill in Chancery (Garford v. Cashell, 1634), in which the above facts are set forth. It is an attempt to recover £300 on the part, for some reason, of Thomas, younger brother of Arthur, from the Trustees under the will of Robert Cashell, father of Letitia. There are also two or three affidavits dated a few years after the Bill in respect of the above case, but there is nothing in them to indicate the place of abode of Arthur and his wife, and of their issue. This is what I want to discover. In the Registers of Corby, South Lincolnshire, are entries of the baptism of Charles, Frances, and Mary, 1660-64, children of Francis and Grace Garford, and in after years comes Anthony. There were in those days Garfords in various parishes in South Lincolnshire, but I have been quite unable to connect Francis with any of them, although these Garford families are all, more or less, intimately connected with each other, and it is to be observed that the names of Arthur, Charles, Francis, and Anthony never appear among them, while Francis, as a Christian name, occurs among Yorkshire Garforths, and Anthony was the name of Arthur's grandfather, of one of his brothers, and of his eldest nephew, born 1610, and who succeeded to Steeton Hall. Bearing in mind the comparative rarity of the surname in either form, and that Francis does not appear to be connected with the local Garfords of South Lincolnshire, I think it not improbable that he was the son of Arthur and Letitia. This is what I want to prove. It is evident that Francis was a young man in 1660, for he married again at the end of the century, after the death of Grace, in 1697, at Ryhall. That place and Corby are within twenty-five miles of Glatton.

I may add that I am the direct descendant of Francis, the son of Francis Garford, of Corby, through an unbroken line of Johns, all eldest sons, without a second Christian name, of whom my grandson, aged eighteen months, is the seventh. A rare sequence, I believe.

JOHN GARFORD.

* The family can be traced back to the 15th century.—See Dr. Whitaker's "Craven," and Mr. Clough's "History of Steeton."

EARLY CUMBERLAND AND WESTMORELAND PEDIGREES FROM THE PLEA ROLLS.

I.—Cumberland Michs. 42 E. 3. Coram Rege Roll, No. 163.—A suit showing that Elena, who was wife of Nicholas de Vespount, had died seized of the Manor of Souby, settled by the said Nicholas on himself and her for their lives, with remainder to the heirs male of their bodies together.

Their son Robert is their heir, and aged thirteen. The said manor is held of the heirs of Gregory Burdon by knight service.

The following pedigree is given:—

ALEXANDER BURDEN had issue,

GREGORY BURDON died s.p., seized of the fourth part of the manor of Clifford, co. York.

ROGER BURDON (brother and heir of Gregory), who had issue, Thomas B., son and heirs; who had issue, Brian B., son and heir; who had issue, Margaret B., daur. and heir; who married Thomas Ughtred, and had issue, Thomas U., son and heir.

ELEN BURDEN m. . . . de Kirkton. They had issue, Robert de K., son and heir; who had issue, John de K., son and heir.

The above John de Kirketon claims that Gregory Burdon was not the son of Alexander, but was the son of William Burdon, Chivaler; and that Gregory, having had no brother Roger' he (John) is the heir of Gregory, as heir to Gregory's sister Elen. (Memb. 41.)

Coram Rege Roll, 172. Michs. 45 Edw. III., shows that a jury found that Gregory and Elen were children by the first wife, and Roger by a second wife. A verdict was, therefore, given in favour of John de Kirketon as heir of the whole blood.

II.—Westmoreland—Easter, 48 Edw. III. Coram Rege, No. 185.—An account of the descent of the Manor of Wythirslate, in Kendal, showing that John de Lancaster, of Stanested, alienated it in 2 Edw. III. to Michael de Haverington Chivaler; who died thirty-three years ago, and was succeeded by John de Haveryngton, of Aldyngham, his brother and heir; who enfeoffed Michael de Haveryngton, his son.

Both the aforesaid feoffments were without the King's license.

Richard de Roos and Johanna, his wife, hold it in right of the said Johanna, who is daughter and heir of the second Michael.

It is also mentioned that John de Lancaster's wife was named Annora.

Also that the said manor is held of Joan, who was wife of John de Coupland, as of the Fee of Coucy. (Memb. 16, part 2.)

III.—Westmoreland—Easter, 48 Edw. III. Coram Rege, No. 185. —The King's escheator, claimed that Margaret de Roos had in 32 Edw. III. alienated, without the King's license, a piece of land called Routheworth, in the Vill of Helsyngton, to Robert de Wassyngton.

The defendant, also named Robert de Wassyngton, denies this, and gives the following descent:—

WALTER DE STIRKLAND, knight, seized of the said land as of the Fee of Marmaduke de Thwenge. Walter had issue.

JOAN DE STIRKLAND married Robert de Wassyngton; and on them and their heirs her father settled the land. They had issue, Robert de Wassyngton, son and heir; he had issue, Robert de Wassyngton son and heir, the defendant.

The jury found a verdict in favour of the defendant. (M. 19, part 2.)

IV.—SIMON DE RAUGHTON, of Raughton Cumberland, was father of JOHN DE RAUGHTON, his son and heir, who was father of—

JOHN DE RAUGHTON, who died seized of three acres, etc., of land in Raughton by the service of great serjeanty, namely, by the service of guarding the aucipitar, i.e., the master of the hawks, of the Lord King in the forest of Ingelwode, and he also held in capite two messuages and thirty acres of land in Cattescales, in Raughton, in perpetuity, paying eighteen pence annually by the hands of the Sheriff of Cumberland.

This second John de Raughton married twice. His first wife was Margaret de Stapleton, and by an entail of 28th January, 21 Edw. III., lands—apparently those abovementioned—were settled on them and their issue, with remainder to the heirs of Margaret. Margaret died without issue, leaving William de Stapleton, her brother and heir.

John de Raughton, however, married a second wife, and by her had issue—

OLIVER DE RAUGHTON, his son and heir, aged (apparently in 10 Richard II.) eight years and upwards.

Coram Rege. Easter 10 Ric. II., No. 36, M. 17, 2nd part.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

Botterill. Any information helping to carry back the following pedigree will be welcome:—

. . . Botterill (? of Thorganby, Lincolnshire) had issue:—

I.—Thomas B., who had issue:—

Richard B., who married . . . Foster, of Garton, near Duffield. They had issue, seven sons and a daughter, Elizabeth, who married Henry Parker, son of Thomas Parker, of Marsh Chapel, Lincolnshire. Mr. Parker, who died in 1901, was for many years steward to Lady Emily Foley, at Stoke Edith, Herefordshire.

II.—William B., of Thorganby, Lincolnshire, who married Rebecca Robson (sister of John Robson). They had issue:—

(1) William B.

(2) John B., of Thorganby, who removed to East Thorpe, near Market Weighton, and died 5th May, 1843.

There are many descendants of both branches of the family, but it is desired to carry the pedigree farther back. Information is also desired as to the families of Foster, Robson, and Parker.—L. H. B.

Calverley Registers. These have been printed, I believe, by Mr. Margerison down to about 1715. I am anxious to know whether there is any chance of the work being continued to the end of the eighteenth century.

Hilileigh or Hillilee, of Hillilee, in Sowerby, Halifax Parish. This once numerous family, whose name constantly appears in Halifax registers in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, seems to have quite died out. I have heard it suggested that the name has been corrupted to Hiley, but I have no evidence of this, and shall be obliged for information.—H.

Murgatroyd. In view of the forthcoming series of notes relating to this name, the Editor invites correspondence from any persons who are interested in any family of the name, or who have information to give bearing upon Murgatroyd pedigrees.

MARRIAGE BONDS OF THE DEAN AND CHAPTER OF YORK.

By T. B. Whytehead, Esq., Chapter Clerk, and Captain Sandwith, 8th Hussars

The previous Series of Dean and Chapter's Marriage Bonds (completed in Vol. IV., page 33), comprises all that exist in York Minster for the several Vacancies of the See, that is to say, for the whole Diocese, in 1664, 1683-88, 1757, 1761, and 1776-7.

There are also bonds for two later vacancies, 1807-8 and 1847, which may be printed later.

The present Series comprises the Dean and Chapter's Bonds for their own peculiar jurisdiction, and that of most of their prebends, extending over some 70 or 80 parishes in the City of York, and the Counties of York, Nottingham, and Lancaster. Some of the Prebendaries issued their own Marriage Licences, which may be printed later.

These Dean and Chapter Bonds are put up in bundles of various periods, the dates often over-lapping each other, and the early ones have been calendared as they came to hand, a fact which will account for their appearing, now and then, out of their due order of date.

NOTES ON FAMILIES BEARING THE SURNAME OF HAVELOCK.

It is impossible, thank Heaven! for any Englishman worthy of his nationality to see the name of Havelock in print and not to associate it with the illustrious memory of the north-country hero, Sir Henry Havelock, who "crowned a happy life with a fair death" after achieving the never-to-be-forgotten relief of Lucknow. But not everyone, not even, it may be, Macaulay's schoolboy, is aware that from the twelfth to the fifteenth century the name was famous in the minstrelsy of England, and that its fame was based upon tradition possibly handed down from the sixth or seventh century A.D.

For at least six hundred years writers, beginning with Master Rauf de Boun, have associated the legendary "Havelok the Dane" with Grimsby and its eponymous founder, Grim; and the ancient seal of Grimsby still remains to testify to the credence the story had obtained in mediæval times. It is, we believe, a tradition in the family of Sir Henry Havelock that their ancestors, who in the eighteenth century lived at Guiseborough, had migrated thither from Grimsby; but the Editor's careful search through the Subsidy Rolls relating to the latter place, and through other records seems to prove that from the fourteenth to the seventeenth centuries there were no people of the surname of Havelock living at Grimsby.

The name itself is a puzzle, and a distinguished authority asserts that it has no meaning in Danish. Mr. Skeat suggests that it is derived from the Anglo-Saxon gafeluc, Icelandic gaflak, Welsh gaflach, a spear. It may, perhaps, be suggested that the Warwickshire surname of "Hasluck" presents a similar puzzle to those who seek a derivation for every name.

Although, as we have said, there seems to have been no mediæval, and, consequently, there is no modern, family of Havelock, which, through association with Grimsby, could prefer a not improbable claim to descent from the hero of "the lay of Havelock the Dane," yet north-country families bearing the surname are found at an early date, and their present representatives may not unreasonably urge the possibility of such a descent. The question, however, bristles with difficulties, and materials have not yet been discovered which would enable us to decide even as to the possibility of the perpetuation of a surname among the English and Anglo-Danes before the Norman Conquest. Mr. Phillimore, in his account of the family of Stiff, makes out a fair case for the possibility of a descent from Stuf,* the conqueror of the Isle of Wight, but it is difficult to believe that descent even from heroes such as Stuf and Havelok could be remembered in a family for six or seven centuries until it crystallised in a legal surname.

* Usually associated with "Wihtgar" as fellow-conqueror, but it seems probable that "Wihtgar" was merely an adjective associating Stuf with the island he had conquered.

At any rate these notes are not concerned with any such speculations, and we pass on to fulfil our real intention, which is to collect some scattered early occurrences of the name in various parts of the country, and then to give more or less connected accounts of such Havelock families as we have been able to trace.

First, then, it is evident from notes collected by the late General Plantagenet-Harrison, supported by additional M.SS. in the British Museum, No. 26,076, by the calendars of "Ancient Deeds in the P.R.O.," by Wills in the Commissary Courts of London and Essex, and by Subsidy Rolls, that a family or families bearing the surname of Havelock flourished at Stratford Langthorne, and other places in Essex, from the fourteenth century to the seventeenth.

Thus, we find that in 1 Edward III. William Havelock was assessed in the Subsidy Roll under St. Osyth's, Tendring Hundred, Essex; while in 1614 the will of William Havelock, of Tendering, Essex, was proved in the Commissary Court of Essex and Herts.

We have various notes of these Essex Havelocks, but they hardly concern northern genealogists.

The following extracts from General Plantagenet-Harrison's volumes show that the name occurs in various parts of England:—

Vol. X., p. 591—Placita de Jur, etc., 20 Edw. I., Herefd., mem. 12—Hereford—Alice, late wife of Hugh Havelock, of Cobbewalle, plt. v. John de Alba Aqua, Dean of the Church of St. Ethelbert, Hereford, a mes., etc., in Morealeyn, into which said John had not entered until after demise made by said Hugh, late husband of the said Alice (whom in his lifetime she could not gainsay), of said premises to Petronilla de Morealeyn. The Jury say that the Decon (sic) held the said ten on 16 Apl. 19 Edw. I., and the sd. Alicia receives seizin, etc.

Vol. X., p. 786 (Coram Rege Roll, Hil. 7 Edw. III., mem. 68—Cumberland—Ranulphus de Dacre, and Margaret, his wife, p. attorn suum versus John Havelock and William de Blencausope de plito transgr . . . and again Trin. 7 Edw. III., mem. 40 dors.

Vol. X., p. 797 (Coram Rege Roll Trin. 8 Edw. III., m. 33 dors)—Norff—Thomas Havelock, p. attorn., sued v. Hugh, son of Roger Olyot, and Cecilia, his wife, on a plea of trespass.

Vol XII., p. 445—De Banco Com Roll Hil. 24 H. VIII. mem. 27—York—Marmaduke Whythes v. Thomas Havelock, of Thorpe Basset,* sd. co. husbandman and others for taking 100 cartloads of turf out of plaintiff's close at Thorpe Basset; damages, 100s. Mem. 217.

It is evident that in very early times there was a family of Havelocks living at Skelton, in Cleveland, connected no doubt with another family of the same name which lived at the neighbouring town of Guisborough. Of both these families we have numerous notes, derived principally from wills and parish registers, and these it will be well to print before attempting a connected pedigree. Perhaps, in the meantime, some of our readers may be able to supply information which may assist us in the work. We begin, therefore, with the following abstracts of Havelock wills at York, premising that they include all the Havelock wills there to be found from 1557 to 1750:—
